

I just want to say that I will be very disappointed if this merger does not go through. I have had Sirius radio for almost 2 years now and when I'm in my non-everyday vehicle that doesn't have it or someone else's vehicle that doesn't I am bored out of my mind!! I can't stand only having 10 channels to listen to, some not coming in clear and having commercials on them all the time!! It's so annoying and I don't think I will go back to regular radio if the satellite radio companies don't make it because the FCC doesn't want to compete with them or whatever their problem is.

Satellite radio should be no different then cable tv or satellite tv in that it's a pay service and you can buy it if you want to have it; it will be a shame if we don't get the right to choose that for ourselves. Putting the 2 services together would help both companies cut costs allowing one company to flourish verses having 2 companies beat each other up until 1 has to call it quits and more people then have to lose their jobs and all the other consequences that occur.

I think it's ridiculous that this is even an issue, if this doesn't get approved it will be a complete joke and you'll have many very angry people who will complain more about the terrible programming that is put on regular airways everyday!!
